In their book Nordic National Cinemas, authors Tytti Soila, Astrid Soderbergh Widding and Gunnar Iversen explore the cultural and economic contexts in which the national cinemas of the Nordic countries have developed. The book examines the unique cultural, historical, and political factors that have shaped the national cinemas of the Nordic countries, as well as the ways in which these cinemas have responded to and influenced broader cultural and societal trends.

The book argues that the national cinemas of the Nordic countries have played a central role in shaping the cultural and political identities of these nations. The authors highlight the ways in which these cinemas have reflected and shaped the social and cultural values of the Nordic countries, and the ways in which they have contributed to the development of a shared Nordic cultural identity.

In conclusion, Nordic National Cinemas provides an in-depth and nuanced exploration of the complex and diverse national cinemas of the Nordic countries. The book is essential reading for anyone interested in the cultural and political history of the Nordic region, as well as for scholars of film and cultural studies.
